Beauty, identity and the inward life

The Literary Compass explores a world in which faith, social change and artistic ambition reshape literature. Victorian poetry and its later echoes give voice to loss, uncertainty, power and the search for meaning.

Short fiction and reflective essays lead to Chekhov’s The Seagull and Wilde’s The Picture of Dorian Gray, where beauty and desire test the claims of art. Tulsidas, Mahamati Prannath and Vivekananda extend this inquiry through devotion, spiritual understanding and the ethics of work.
